

Butterflies of the World

Did you know our Museum has the largest tropical forest in New Zealand?
It has hundreds of butterflies!

There are about 24,000 species of butterflies around the world. Many butterflies can taste with their feet, which means they can sit on a leaf and tell whether it's edible. This helps them choose the right leaves to lay their eggs on, so the hatching caterpillars will have something to eat.

Take a photo of your masterpiece and email it to tuhura@tuhura.nz to enter the draw for a Family Pass to the Tūhura Science Centre. One pass will be given away at the end of each month.

Name: _____

*Submitting this sheet automatically subscribes you to the Tūhura Otago Museum newsletter, keeping you up to date with our latest events.

TŪHURA
Otago Museum